

SUIT, €1,075, BY PHILIPP PLEIN.
SHIRT, £125; BOW TIE, £65,
BOTH BY HARDY AMIES,
HARDYAMIES.COM. SHOES,
£550, BY JIMMY CHOO,
JIMMYCHOO.COM

ROMEO Y JULIETA BELICOSOS
CIGAR, £20, FROM 1A ST JAMES STREET TOBACCONISTS,
1ASTJAMES.COM

BEST SMOKING

We're well suited for a postprandial puff in this dedicated pavilion

Having a dedicated space for each favourite activity is a hallmark of luxury – think a library, a games room, a spa. Commissioned by a private client for a Zurich townhouse, this smoking pavilion is a worthy addition. Designed by London-based architect Gianni Botsford, it allows the owners to admire the garden while enjoying a postprandial puff and without affecting other residents. Botsford was drafted in by landscape architect Todd Longstaffe-Gowan. 'Our idea was to create a simple structure possessing a richness and complexity in its materiality that would develop relationships with the surroundings,' Botsford says. The first self-supporting translucent concrete building made from engineered precast panels, it seems solid yet light. Altogether as smooth and striking as the Philipp Plein suit we chose to spark up in. ✱ giannibotsford.com; philipp-plein.com